Winston Purdy is a member of the Faculty of Music at McGill University where he teaches voice. His education includes studies in Germany which gives him a special ability as an interpreter of the Lied repertoire.

Wolfgang Bottenberg was born only a few meters from Goethe's birthplace, and received his name in honour of the poet. He teaches music theory and composition at Concordia University.

During his life Goethe witnessed a profound re-orientation of vocal music in Germany, away from a display of virtuosity, aiming towards an ideal fusion of poetry and musical expression. Goethe became actively involved with this movement. Musicians of talent were his close friends, and the musical giants of his time were frequently inspired by his poetry. His influence remained vital throughout the whole period of the flowering of the German Lied.

This concert explores the full range of musical styles of composers who were inspired by one poet.

Concordia University wishes to acknowledge Ultramar Canada for their generous donation of the FALCONE concert grand piano.
